BINGHAM TO WIPE OUT ROWDYISM AT BRIDGE ENTRANCE

Disgraceful Conditions Revealed to Police Commissioner by Evening World and He Acts Promptly to Stop Them.

WILL MAKE NEW YORK END SAFE IN RUSH HOURS.

No More Knocking Down and Trampling Upon Women and Girls to Be Tolerated if It Takes the Entire Force to Stop It.

Protection of life and limb at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge, so long demanded by The Evening World, is assured at last. A stop will be put to the rowdyism there at any cost, and conditions will be improved if the entire police force has to be sent there for the purpose.

The Evening World at noon to-day laid before Commissioner Bingham a full statement of conditions at the Manhattan plaza of the Brooklyn Bridge, as observed by its representatives and told in hundreds of letters from women, girls, and even men, complaining of the brutal actions of the mob that makes the entrance to the bridge the most dangerous place in the city to pedestrians. He was shown proof of instances in which women and young girls have been pushed, knocked down and trampled upon by hurrying ruffians, regardless of the inefficient police force there, and utterly careless of the safety or lives of weak women and girls who are compelled to use the bridge morning and evening.

Commissioner Bingham has had this matter up for consideration for a time, but the condition at the bridge has been presented to him as charitably as possible, and he has had little opportunity for personal observation. The exposure of actual conditions opened his eyes.

"I don't want to be quoted as saying anything about what I will do," said the Commissioner, emphatically. "I have seen too much about what the Commissioner Bingham promises that he will do. I don't like that."

"I want to have it said, if anything is to be said, that I have done something, and that you shall have a chance to say. You can quote me as saying that I have the matter under careful consideration and complete and thorough—use those words, 'complete and thorough'—protection will be given to people who want to go over that bridge."

Commissioner Bingham immediately sent for an officer high in the police force, whom he holds responsible for the discipline in control of keeping order at the bridge, and a quick, short and decisive interview followed between that officer and the Commissioner. The result will be an extra force of men at the bridge this afternoon, and something will be done to protect pedestrians from the mobs of boys that have made that spot so dangerous heretofore.

STATEN ISLAND BOAT CRASHES INTO SLIP

The Queens Nearly Put Out of Commission and Passengers Frightened.

The big ferry-boat Queens, one of the new Municipal boats, was nearly put out of commission to-day, when it ran at full speed into the St. George slip, on Staten Island, causing a panic among the 150 men, women and children on board and greatly damaging the pier. When the crash came passengers were being downed from the upper deck and several of them were thrown to the floor. No one was injured. The force of the collision shook the boat as though it were made of paper. Believing that the vessel was sinking, the passengers frantically rushed to the main deck and had it not been for the efforts of several deckhands, women and children might have jumped overboard.

CORONER HOLDS GROOM.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Attorney Sent to Protect His Rights.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt to-day sent her personal attorney, Peter R. Gatens, of No. 280 Broadway, to the Coroner's office to look after the interests of her groom, Michael Mallon, who was arrested for responsibility in the death of the 16-year-old child, the Thursday Mallon was leading Mrs. Vanderbilt's pet mare when the animal became frightened at Sixty-fourth street and Third avenue and kicked the child, inflicting a skull fracture, from which he died yesterday.

Mallon was to-day held in $1,000 by Coroner Handburger, and was released in the morning by Attorney Gatens, who is to appear in court.

TELLS OF MURDER, THEN CONFESSES GUILT OF CRIME

Strangler Kills Woman by Winding Wire About Her Throat.

ATTACKED ON STREET.

Victim Well Known in Chicago Social Circles—Made Hard Fight for Life.

SLAYER HID HER BODY.

Left It in Yard of Home All Night. Then Gave Alarm and Later Told All.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—After giving the alarm that a revolting murder had been committed, Richard Ivins, twenty-one years old, of No. 368 Belden avenue, to-day confessed to the police that he was the slayer of Mrs. Frank Hollister, who lived at No. 48 Fullerton avenue, and who was found strangled in the yard of the house last night.

The woman had been choked to death with wire and her body thrown into a heap of refuse.

She had made a desperate fight for life and her corpse presented an awful sight when found. Three strands of copper wire had been wound tight about her neck, cutting into the flesh, her face was cut and bruised, her hair hanging about her head and her clothing badly torn.

Ivins was the first to give the alarm to-day, he telling his father he had found the woman murdered, and being one to later call the police.

He was suspected and finally broke down under the police "third degree" and confessed the crime.

Ivins in his confession implicated other three men, and the police expect to make more arrests.

Mrs. Hollister left her home yesterday afternoon to attend the funeral of a friend, Mrs. Emma Semple, at No. 123 Seminary avenue. That was the last seen of her by any of her friends. After waiting until 7 o'clock last night for her return, Mr. Hollister informed the police that his wife was missing, and an all-night search was instituted. The men removed the body and notified the police.

Early this morning, as the story was first told to the police, the two sons of Mr. Ivins noticed the feet of a woman protruding from the refuse which lay in a small inclosure just off the alley. They were almost entirely covered. The men removed the body and notified the police.

As soon as the patrol wagon had arrived at the spot a crowd gathered. George G. Congdon, choirmaster at the Wesley Methodist church, who lives where Mrs. Hollister lived, said that he saw one of the crowd and at once identified him.

It was removed to an undertaking establishment and her husband notified. Mrs. Hollister had made a desperate fight before she was killed. Her long hair was tangled as if it had been pulled violently down; the front of her silk waist had been torn open and the glove of her right hand was missing. Three rings which she usually wore on this hand were gone.

Other small articles of jewelry which she had worn at the time of leaving the house had been taken from her person. It was found that she had been robbed.

Following an autopsy, the body of Mrs. Hollister was placed on the floor of a room in the house. The police finally took both Ivins boys to the station and put them through the third degree.

ABE HUMMEL GETS TIME TO FIGHT HIS CASE

Justice Woodward Grants Lawyer a Certificate of Reasonable Doubt.

Justice Woodward, of the Appellate Division of the Brooklyn Supreme Court, this afternoon granted a certificate of reasonable doubt to Abe Hummel. This certificate will not act as a stay against the carrying out of the sentence against the lawyer until his appeal for a new trial is heard.

The Court says in granting the certificate of reasonable doubt that in his opinion the testimony of Charles A. Dodge, the chief accusing witness against Hummel, was not sufficiently corroborated. It is very likely that the lawyer's present $10,000 bail bond will stand.

FAIR GROUNDS, NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 13.—The Merchants' Handicap, fourth on the card, was to-day's stake feature here. It was at one mile and an event matched field started. The other races were sufficiently interesting to tempt the bettors who hoped to get more than an even break with "the bookies."

LYRIC HANDICAP CITY PARK'S STAKE

CITY PARK, NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 13.—The best card of the week was down for the Lyric Handicap. It contained seven races, with the Lyric Handicap as the stake feature. Good fields were engaged in nearly every event, and the best of the season expected.

HADLEY SCORES ROGERS; IS CHEERED IN COURT

Remarkable Scene at the Finish of the Standard Oil Argument in Chambers Before Justice Gildersleeve.

Applause in a courtroom in this city is unusual, but Attorney-General Hadley, of Missouri, won it at the conclusion of his argument in the Henry H. Rogers case before Justice Gildersleeve to-day. Opposing counsel had impugned his motives in coming to New York to get testimony in his crusade against the Standard Oil Company. After he had finished with the legal aspect of the contention that Mr. Rogers should be compelled to answer the questions as to his ownership of stock in the Standard Oil Company, of Missouri, he devoted a minute or so to defense of himself. He did it so neatly and effectively that scores of those who heard him clapped their hands and stamped their feet until the court officers rapped for order.

The demonstration was remarkable not only because Mr. Hadley is a stranger, but because the audience was not composed of ordinary court hangers-on. Most of those who listened with keen interest to the arguments were lawyers who entertained toward the slim, square-jawed young man from Missouri only sentiments of curiosity when he arose to answer the distinguished counsel on the other side. At the conclusion of the proceedings many of these lawyers gathered about him in the corridor and congratulated him.

Examination Reserved.

From the courtroom Mr. Hadley went to No. 67 Wall street to resume the examination of witnesses before Commissioner Sanborn.

Mr. Wollman opened by briefly explaining the status of the case. He said that Mr. Hadley has begun suit in Missouri to dissolve a monopolistic trust that he believes exists with the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Standard Oil Company of St. Louis, and the Republic Oil Company, as parties. In pursuance of his design to prove this he served a subpoena upon H. H. Rogers, who refused to answer when asked if he owned stock in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, and as to his knowledge of the relations existing between that company and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company.

Hagerman Replies.

Frank Hagerman, of Kansas City, opened on behalf of Mr. Rogers. He claimed that the only points in the contentions of the Attorney-General are two in number, as follows:

First—The Standard Oil Company and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company divide the State of Missouri into parts as trade territory.

Second—That they have combined to fix the price of oil in that territory.

Judge Hagerman briefly sketched the proceedings that have thus far been had in Missouri.

"They are pretty busy out there with what they call trusts," said Mr. Hagerman. "They have got after the Hearst Trust, the Tobacco Trust, the Insurance and the Oil Trust."

He maintained that the question of stock ownership does not enter into the case at all, inasmuch as the only point at issue are the two mentioned at the beginning of his argument. "It is entitled to protection," he declared. "The Supreme Court of Missouri is now advising this question. Until the Missouri Supreme Court renders a decision the courts of this State should extend him full protection."

Judge Hagerman said that when the proceedings before Commissioner Sanborn began seats had been provided "for every newspaper reporter in New York" and "the walls were lined with cameras."

Mr. W. V. Rowe delivered a brief argument on behalf of the Standard Oil Company.

LIFE-SAVERS' BOAT FROM THE CHEROKEE SMASHED BY SEA

Broken to Bits on Atlantic City Pier, Where a Great Crowd Gathered to Watch Stranded Liner—Fear that Crew Perished.

GALE DRIVES THE STEAMER BACK ON BRIGANTINE SHOAL

Tugs Towing Her to Deep Water Helpless Against Wind—Great Waves Sweep Over Vessel's Decks as Crew Throws the Cargo Overboard.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ATLANTIC CITY, Jan. 13.—Crowds of spectators braving the storm for a glimpse of the stranded Cherokee, lying in the path of the big breakers sweeping over the Brigantine bar, were thrilled at noon when strong gales made out a drifting lifeboat floating at the mercy of the wind and waves.

As the boat neared the beach it was seen it had capsized and had no crew.

A hundred men rushed into the surf to secure the boat. Before any of them could reach it the waves had carried the little craft under the steel pier, where it was smashed to pieces under the heavy piling. The pieces strewn along the beach show it is one belonging to a government crew.

While it is believed the boat was succeeded in reaching her. Now they have been unsuccessful and she still lies in the trough of the sea with waves breaking as high as her smokestack.

Another message appealed for lighters to save a part of the cargo, now being thrown overboard, but no boats of that kind can live in the heavy sea. Capt. Sele Jones of the Beach Haven Wrecking crew, arrived at Brigantine this morning, but has so far been unable to reach the Cherokee. The tug Somers E. Smith arrived early to assist in the work of pulling off the big vessel, but is believed to have been unable to stand the hammering of the waves close to the bar and put to sea.

Just when it seemed certain early to-day that the Cherokee would be drawn off safe and snug in deep water a husky, roaring northeast gale slapped into her and buffeted and mauled the big iron steamer until she turned right about and settled again in the sands, broadside to the storm, with huge seas constantly sweeping her decks.

The wind proved mightier than the tugs. With each passing hour the prospects for saving the vessel seemed less.

Nevertheless the passengers were reported as being well and in fair spirits. They were prisoners in closely battered cabins. The crew, tethered to stanchions and rigging with ropes, to keep them from being washed overboard, desperately labored at the task of heaving the cargo into the sea.

The crews of two life-saving boats from the South Brigantine station were prisoners on board. When the liner first hit yesterday afternoon the boats were in the water.
